

ABOUT LAT CAB

The Long-Acting Technologies (LAT) Community Advisory Board (CAB) is a cross-disease CAB focused on long-acting technologies for malaria, latent tuberculosis infection (LTBI), and hepatitis C virus. The LAT CAB will review and meaningfully participate in every step of the research and development process, including on research questions, protocol, and trial design. The CAB will also strive to generate demand for and expand access to these LATs by preparing affected communities, advising on approaches to introduce LATs, and developing community recommendations.

ABOUT THE LONGEVITY PROJECT

Progress towards ending malaria, hepatitis C and tuberculosis has been slowed by complicated treatment regimens, drug resistance, stigma and enduring gaps in health systems. The Longevity project funded by Unitaid seeks to address these challenges by developing long-acting formulations of pre-existing malaria, tuberculosis and hepatitis C medications, requiring less frequent administration for use in low- and middle-income countries.
